

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Some Notes on the Verse-Division of the New Testament.

PROF. J. RENDEL HARRIS, M.A.

CLARE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE, ENG.

THE first New Testament that is known to contain the modern system of verses is the edition of Robert Stephen of 1551, printed, as is supposed, at Geneva. The volume (or pair of volumes, for it is sometimes divided) is a collector's rarity, on account of the peculiar position which it occupies in the history of the printed text of the New Testament. Copies are sometimes found dated MDXLI. instead of MDLI.; the one in my possession actually has the X erased in the middle of the date.

Photograph 1 is a representation of its title-page. From this we are advised that the book contains the New Testament (in Greek) with two translations, one being that of Erasmus, and the other from the Vulgate. There is also a Harmonia Evangelica (wanting in my copy) and a copious index, the latter being taken from some early printed Latin Bible. When we turn to the text, we find that the Greek stands between the Vulgate and the Erasmic renderings, marked at the top of the pages by V. and E. respectively, the arrangement being such that the Vulgate has always the inner place, the Erasmic the outer; and between the Greek and the Erasmic stand the verse-numerations in a column by themselves. Stephen has printed the Vulgate in a smaller type¹ than that of the Erasmic, and it is evident that it was looked upon with less liking. He says, however, in the preface to the reader that he did not think the old version (i.e. the Vulgate) was to be contemned; first, because in many places it seemed to be the equivalent of a very early Greek exemplar; second, because it was so rooted in the memory of men, that it could hardly be plucked up; and third, because by a comparison of the versions

¹ A peculiarity which appears already in the 4th Erasmus edition of 1527, where the order is Gk.—Erasm.—Vulg., and the Vulg. is in smaller type. It appears in the same form in the 6th Erasmus of 1541.

ΑΓΑΝΤΑ ΤΑ' ΤΗΣ ΚΑΙΝΗΣ
διαθήκης.

NOUUM IESV Christi D. N.
Testamentum.

Cum duplici interpretatione, D. Erasmi, & Veteris interpretis: Harmonia item Euangelica, & copioso Indice.

Ex officina Roberti Stephani.

M. D. L. I.

with the text, a moderate Greek scholar could readily catch the force of the Greek words. It seems rather strange to us that a strife for existence should have raged between the Vulgate and the Erasmic translation, and that the latter should almost have killed off the former; yet something like this was the case, and when the Erasmic translation ceased to find favor, it yielded the field not to the Vulgate, but to a successor, apparently sprung from its own loins, the version of Theodore Beza. Although this version also has well nigh passed into oblivion, it was, until quite recently, the chosen Latin text of the British and Foreign Bible Society, which did not venture to print the Vulgate, from a fear of the resuscitation of ancient strifes that have been associated with certain of its renderings.²

Now with regard to the Greek text we do not need to say much; it is taken, with slight modifications, from the famous royal edition of the previous year 1550.³ The marginal references have also been taken over from some previous Latin text, but with this modification, that whereas in the earlier editions, the references were made to the chapters and letters (under which the chapters were subdivided), the references in the edition of 1551 are by chapters, letters, and verses. So that if on the margin of Matt. i. in 1550 we find

Λουκ. γ. Ε	we shall find on the	Luc. 3. e. 24
Γεν. κβ. Δ	margin of 1551, not	Gene. 22. a. 1
καὶ κε Δ	necessarily taken	Gene. 25. d. 24
Γεν. κθ. Δ	from St. ¹⁵⁵⁰ , but	Gen. 29. d. 35
καὶ λη. Η	either from that or	Gen. 38. g. 27 etc.	some early Latin	etc.
	text,

We must pay some attention to these, because they may assist us in identifying editions which are based upon the Stephen of 1551, or in finding the Latin copy from which the Stephen of 1551 was set up. It should also be noticed that the 1551 edition contains references to an Evangelical Harmony, concerning which something needs to be said; and also that it contains a few references, where some other passage of the special book is quoted, under the form infra and supra, where the 1550 edition says only κεφ. For instance, we find over against

Matt. 7¹ the reference Har. i. 34: and over against

Acts 7⁴⁸ the words Infrà 17. f. 24 where ed. 1550 has only κεφ. ις. Ζ., which means that a similar sentiment will be found in Acts 17²⁴.

A comparison with early printed Latin Bibles, such as the Stephen

² Such, for example, as "agile poenitentiam" and "ipsa conteret caput tuum."

³ As Mr. Hoskier points out, it follows the 1550 edition in peculiar blunders.

of 1528, shows that these infra and supra notes come from the margins of a Latin Bible. Returning now to the leading peculiarity of this edition, viz. the verse-numbering, we find that there has been a good deal of discussion as to its origin. The best treatment of the subject is the tract of Ezra Abbot which is incorporated with Gregory's Prolegomena to Tischendorf (pp. 167-182). From it we learn that Tischendorf and Reuss found the origin of the Stephanic verses in a Latin Vulgate published by Stephen in 1548, but that De Wette and Keil correct this to 1558, which rules out the idea of the priority of the Latin. As, however, there was no Stephen Vulgate published in 1548, and, as we shall see presently, the numeration of the verses is found in earlier Latin texts than 1558, we may set these statements aside. Others have suggested that the Latin division occurs in the Stephen Vulgate of 1545, or in that of 1557. We shall see whether there is anything to be said in support of these suggestions.

It has been noted by Abbot that in Acts 24 there is a double numeration of the verses, as follows (p. 447 verso) : ⁴

Erasmus.	¹⁹	Τινὲς δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς 'Α-	Vulgate.
	²⁰	σίας 'Ιουδαίου, οὗς δὲ ἐπὶ

The obvious explanation of this is that a verse has been lost, nor is it difficult to find the missing verse, which is actually extant, with the right numbering, in the Sixtine Vulgate of 1590, though it is omitted in the Clementine Vulgate of 1592. It reads thus : et apprehenderunt me clamantes et dicentes : Tolle inimicum nostrum. The fact that the passage is in the Sixtine Vulgate would be a sufficient intimation of its currency in earlier printed Vulgates, and as a matter of fact, it will be found in the Stephen Vulgate of 1545 and 1555, to say nothing of other editions. Here, then, we find that a famous early Western reading in the Acts has deranged the verse-numeration. The suggestion is obvious, that the verses must have been marked upon an early copy of the Vulgate, before they came to be marked in the 1551 Stephen. The Greek is excluded as a first-marked copy, because the gloss or reading is not extant in Greek, and the Erasmus translation is also excluded, on the ground that it follows the Greek.

For confirmation of this theory, we pass on to Professor Nestle's

⁴ See plate 2.

credens omnibus
quæ in Lege & Prophetis scripta
sunt,

Spem habēs in Deum, fore quā
schilip̄i expectāt resurrectionem mortuorum, iu-storum simul &
iniustorum.

Quia in hoc &
ipse fideo sine offendiculo con-
scientiam habere
erga Deum, & er-
ga homines sem-
per.

Post annos au-
tem plures accē-
si | elemosynas
exhibiturus ingē-
tem meam, & o-
blationes:

Supra a. d. 19

Supra a. d. 19

In quib' cōpererūt me purifi-
cātū in templo,
haud cum turba,
neq; cū tumultu.

Quidā autē ex Asīa Iudæi, quos oportebat apud te præsto esse, & ac-
cusare, si quid habe-
rent adversū me:

Autē hi ipsi di-
cūt, siquid deprehenderunt in me

πιστεύων πᾶσι τοῖς κατὰ τὸ νόμον καὶ τοῖς προφῆταις γεγραμμένοις,

Ελπίδα ἔχων εἰς τὸν Θεόν, ὅτι καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐπι-πρῶσθ' ἔχονται, ἀνάστασιν μέλειν ἐπιστάμενοι νεκρῶν, δικαίων τε & ἀδίκων.

Εἰ γούτω δ' ἀποτίς ἀ-σκή, ἀπερὸ σκοποῦ συνείδησιν ἔχων πρὸς τὸν Θεόν καὶ πρὸς ἀνθρώπους διαπαντός.

Δι' ἐτῶν δὲ πλείονων
παρεγρόμην ἐλεημοσύ-νας ποιῆσαι εἰς τὸ ἔθνος μου, & προσφορὰς.

Εν οἷς εὐρόν με ἡγιομένον ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ, οὐ μὲν ὄχλῳ, οὐδ' ἐμὲ θορύβῳ.

Τινὲς δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Ασίας Ἰουδαῖοι, οἵ τ' εἰσι σοὺ παρεῖναι, & κατηγορεῖν, εἴ τι ἔχουν πρὸς με·

Ἡ αὐτοὶ οὐτοὶ ἐπιτάσσειν εἶπ' εὐρον ὅτι ἐμοὶ meo, credēs

omnib' quæ
in Lege & Prophetis
scripta sunt,

Spem ha-
bens in Deo, quod & hi ip̄i expectāt, re-
surrectionē futuram iu-
stōrū & ini-
quorū.

In hoc &
ipse fideo
sine offend-
iculo conscien-
tiam habere
ad Deum, &
ad homines semper.

Post annos autē plu-
res, elemos-
ynas faci-
ens in genti-
bus veni, &
oblationes & votæ.

In quibus
me purifica-
tū in templo,
nō cū turba,
neque cum tumultu.

Quidā autē
ex Asia Iu-
dæi, quos oportebat ap-
ud te præ-
sto esse, & ac-
cusare, siquid
haberēt ad-
versum me:
Autē hi ipsi
dicūt, siquid
invenierunt

me in quæ
in coe

Nisi
har se
do to clamater et Quor
telus ac m tū eg
cor l vobis
vbi
et li
lis,
quæ
vbi
ecce vbi
des vbi

In hoc &
ipse fideo
sine offend-
iculo conscien-
tiam habere
ad Deum, &
ad homines
semper.

Post annos autē plu-
res, elemos-
ynas faci-
ens in genti-
bus veni, &
oblationes & votæ.

In quibus
me purifica-
tū in templo,
nō cū turba,
neque cum
tumultu.

Quidā autē
ex Asia Iu-
dæi, quos o-
portebat ap-
ud te præ-
sto esse, & ac-
cusare, siquid
haberēt ad-
versum me:
Autē hi ipsi
dicūt, siquid
invenierunt

certius inquit suri sunt de
illo.

Tu vero ne
credideris il
lis: invidian
tur enim ei
ex eis: viri
amplius quā
quadragesis
qui se deuo nerunt non manducare neque bibe re, donec in terficiantur:
& nunc pa
rari sūt, ex pectantes p missum tuū.

Tribunus
igitur dimi
sit adolescē
tem, preci
sient necul
ogueretur
quoniam hæc
tota tibi fe
lisset.

Et conuo
ctis duobus centurioni
bus dixit il
lis: Parate mi
tes ducent
os, ut eant
que Cæsa
ri, & equi
s septua
ginta, & lan ctos du centos, à ter
tia hora po
stis.

Et tamen
prepara-

te, ut impo
nentes Pau
lum, eum sal
tū perduce
rēt ad Felicē
præsidentem, Scribēs epi
stolam con
tinentē hęc.
Claudius Ly
sias optimo præsidi Felici
salutem.

Virū hunc
comprehē
sum à Iu
dæis, & incl ipientem in
terfici ab eis,
superueniēs
eum exerce
tu, eripui, co
gnito quā Romanus est:

Volēnsque
scire causam
quam obli
ciebant illi,
deduxi eum
in cōcilium
eorum.

Quem in veni accusa
ri de qua stionibus Le
gisproforū,
nihil verō di
gnum morte
aut vincu
lis habētem
cristem.

Et quā
mibi perla-

ἵνα ὀπιθεύσαντες τὸν Παῦλον διασώσωσι πρὸς Φήλικα τὸν ἡγεμόνα, Γράψας ὀπισθὲν πε
εἰχουσιν τὸν τύπον τοῦ
τον. Κλαύδιος Λυσίας τῷ κράτῳ ἡγεμόνι Φήλικι χαίρειν.

Τὸν ἄνδρα τοῦτον συλ ληφθέντα ὑπὸ τῶν Ιου
δαίων, καὶ μέλλοντα ἀπα ρῆσθαι ὑπὸ αὐτῶν, ὅπ τις σὺν τῷ Ἰσραὴλ μα
ρτυροῦμαι αὐτὸν, μαρτυ ρῶ Ῥωμαῖός ἐστι.

Βουλόμενος δὲ γινῶναι
τῶν αἰτίων δι' ὧν ἐκεί νου αὐτῷ, κατήγαγον
αὐτὸν εἰς τὸ συνέδριον αὐτῶν.

Ὅν εὗρον ἐκκαλούμε
νον παρὰ ζητημάτων τῶ νό μου αὐτῶν, μηδὲν δὲ ἄ ξιον θανάτου ἢ δεσμῶν ἐκκληματίζοντα.

Μένων δὲ μοι 30

te, ut impo
situm Paulum, saluum
perducant ad Fe
licem præsidentem.

Scriptis literis
in hac formam, Claudius Ly
sias potētissimo pra sidi Felici salutē.

Virū hunc com
prehensum à Iu
dæis, quum iam
esset interficien dus ab eis, super ueniens cum ex
ercitu, eripui, co
gnito quod Ro
manus esset:

Volēnsque sci
re causā ob quā
accusarēt illum, deduxi illum in cōcilium eorum.

Quem compe
ri accusari de qua stionibus Legis i psorum, nullū di
gnum morte aut
vinculis habentē
crimen.

Et quū indicatū

recent discovery that there is another case of such double numeration in the preceding chapter (Acts 23^{25/26}, p. 445 recto) as follows:

Vulgate.	Γράψας ἐπιστολὴν πε- ²⁵ ριέχουσαν τὸν τύπον τοῦ- ²⁶ τον· Κλαύδιος Λυσίας τῷ κρατίστῳ ἡγεμόνι Φήλικι χαίρειν.	Erasmus.
----------	--	----------

Here again there has been the loss of a Latin verse, viz. “Timuit enim ne forte raperent eum Judaei, et occiderent, et ipse postea calumniam sustineret, tanquam accepturus pecuniam.” This is clearly the missing v.²⁵: it is actually extant as the v.²⁵ in the Clementine Vulgate of 1592 (and in the Sixtine of 1590?) ; moreover, the Antwerp Polyglot of 1571 expressly says, in printing this verse from the Latin with no counterpart in Greek or Syriac, “deest 25 versus.” It appears also in the Vulgate of 1566 as v.²⁵, and, no doubt, in many similar places. We have, then, found two cases where the verse-numeration of St.¹⁵⁵¹ has been deranged through the use of a previous verse-divided Vulgate text containing glosses.⁵ Stephen does not print the glosses, but he preserves their verse-numeration.

We shall now be in a better position to determine the origin of the verses, for we are limited to the Latin Vulgate, and either a printed edition has been taken and marked for office copy, or else an edition of the Latin Vulgate has actually been issued before 1551 with the Stephanic enumeration. Now against the second of these suppositions, there are a number of adverse considerations: in the first place, the probability is that such an edition, if it ever existed, would be one of Stephen's own; and perhaps this would lend some color to Tischendorf's statement that the verses first appeared in the Stephen Vulgate of 1548. There is, however, no such Stephen edition. There is, indeed, a Lyons Vulgate of 1548, but it has no enumeration; although, as might have been expected, the glosses to which we have referred are in its text. There is no trace that I know of in the Lyons Bibles of the time of the existence of such verses: the Lyons Vulgate of 1553 has the glosses, but not the numbers; the Lyons French text of 1551 is equally destitute of enumeration; so are the Lyons French of 1556, and the Lyons Italian of 1551. These considerations make powerfully against the belief that the Lyons ⁵ These glosses are found in the Vulgate columns of the 4th edition of Erasmus of 1527 and in the 6th edition of 1541.

Vulgate of 1548 is the fons et origo versuum Stephanicorum. Nor has any other Vulgate text been found, printed before 1551, which contains the verses. For example, the Paris Vulgate of 1549 has no verse divisions nor enumeration, though it has the glosses, which are obelized: neither are there any divisions or numeration in the Paris Vulgate of 1552. Until some copy is produced of a printed Vulgate with verse-numeration earlier than 1551, we must fall back upon our other alternative supposition, viz. that a Vulgate has been taken and marked as a printer's copy to be used in setting up the edition of 1551. We will see whether anything can be done in the way of identifying this copy.

First of all, let us try to find out something about the printed Greek Testaments and translations which derive their arrangement from Stephen of 1551.

I have before me the French-Italian edition of the blessed martyr⁶ Giovanni Luigi Paschale, published in 1555, and, as is supposed, at Geneva. It has the verses numbered, and is evidently based on St.¹⁵⁵¹. He expressly says in his preface that he has taken over the Stephanic verses: "Habbiam poi voluto aiutar la memoria di quelli che volentieri s' esercitano in questa santa lettione, si per poter piu facilmente riscontrare insieme passo per passo l' una e l' altra traduzione, stamparle cosi distinte per versati, secondo il compartimento di Roberto Stefano." The language is based upon Stephen's own preface. Moreover, he takes to his own margin all the matter in the Stephen margin, with the exception of the references to the Harmony; and uses Disopra and Disotto to translate the Infra and Supra, which we have seen above to be a feature, though not a peculiar feature, of the Stephen of 1551. Thus in Matt. 3⁷ the marginal note of Paschale, Disot. 23. a. 34, is meant for Infra, 23. d. 34, of Stephen, unless it can be shown to come from some previous Latin text. Now this Franco-Italian New Testament appears to have an intermediate link with St.¹⁵⁵¹, for Paschale is not responsible for the French. He found that, as I suppose, in the French Stephen of 1552, which also had the numbered verses, and had in all probability (for I have not seen it) corrected the wrong versing of the two glosses in the Acts in the same way as Paschale corrects it, by pushing the verses forward until the end of the chapter. Now this French Stephen, which we assume to lie between St.¹⁵⁵¹ and the Italian French Stephen of 1555, is in reality a double text; it is ⁶ Burnt in Rome in 1560.

French-Erasmic. Apparently, then, it is a bilingual text arrived at by taking the Stephen of 1551, discarding the Vulgate, and translating either the Erasmic or the Greek. The French text in Paschale's New Testament follows Erasmus so closely as to print in a smaller character the small-type expansions of the Erasmic text. This copy is followed, no doubt, by the French Genevise Bible of 1553. All these copies are, in fact, to be referred to Geneva. The system of verses is, then, Genevan in origin, appearing first in what we may call the trilingual of 1551, and from thence passing to the other editions, as follows:

To Geneva, also, must be referred the first English New Testament in verses, viz. the Whittingham of 1557. While, then, there is no evidence for a number of years of the printing of verse-divided Bibles and Testaments elsewhere than at Geneva, there is abundant suggestion that at Geneva verse-divided texts had become the fashion. And a number of such printed texts are seen to be directly derived from the Stephen of 1551.

It follows from the foregoing that in examining for Latin Vulgates divided into verses, and making a study of their genealogy, we must be careful in every case to eliminate such as may be derived directly from the Latin columns of St.¹⁵⁵¹.

For example, suppose we take the famous Stephen Latin New Testament of 1556/7, which is also the first Bezan text. The text of this volume is double, the place of honor and the preëminence of large type being given to Beza's own Nova Tralatio, while the Vulgate is on the margin in smaller letters just as in the Stephen of 1551. This text is derived from St.¹⁵⁵¹ by removing the Greek and revising the Erasmic. Look for example at the first page of Matthew, where the margin shows

1 Para. 2. a. 5
ruth 4. 6. 18,

and the Bezan edition has even followed the printing of ruth with a small 'r'.⁷ Then look at the spelling of Ozias in v.⁹, where Beza follows Erasmus in spelling Hozias. Evidently the Vulgate-Beza text is derived from St.¹⁵⁵¹ by omitting the Greek, and reforming the Erasmic. Notice, again, how persistent is the contempt for the Vulgate.

The verse-division is in this Stephen-Beza of 1556/57, but it can only be referred to the St.¹⁵⁵¹ and not to any previously existing Latin Bible. And this conclusion is confirmed by the fact that it has the traces of the glosses to which we have been referring, in the shape of the double numeration which characterizes St.¹⁵⁵¹.⁸

Coming now to a slightly earlier date, we find two volumes that must be carefully examined; viz. the Stephen Vulgate of 1555, and a Stephen commentary on the Gospels of 1553. Of these the former is said by Abbot to be the first Latin Bible divided into verses. It is, like the other volumes which we have been discussing, a Geneva edition.⁹ What is remarkable about it is that the text is not broken up into verses; at the same time it has the verse-numeration inserted in the body of the text. The first fact shows that it is not likely to have been set up from the Latin column of 1551; the second fact may be used to prove that its verse-numeration was taken from St.¹⁵⁵¹ directly. For look at the glosses from which our argument proceeds; they are in the text, though wanting in Stephen, but they are numbered as follows:

Acts 23 ¶ 25 et 26 Ti-muit enim ne forte raperent eum Judaci et occiderent etc.

Acts 24 ¶ 19 et 20 Et apprehenderunt me, clamantes et dicentes, Tolle inimicum nostrum Quidam autem ex etc.

⁷ I find this small 'r' in the Lyons Vulgate of 1548: e.g. 1 par. 2. b ruth. 4. d.

⁸ Beza has a note on Acts 24¹⁸ which betrays his knowledge of the lost gloss, as follows:

"Neque cum tumultu, μήτε μετὰ θορύβου. In nonnullis exemplaribus Vulgatae editionis subjiuntur ista quae in nullis Graecis codicibus invenimus, Et apprehenderunt me, clamantes et dicentes, tolle inimicum nostrum, καὶ ἐκράτησάν με κράζοντες, καὶ λέγοντες, αἶρε τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἡμῶν."

⁹ It has no mark of place, but on the title-page "Oliva Roberti Stephani, M.D.LV.," what might seem, at first sight, to make against Geneva is the colophon, which shows that it was not directly or wholly Stephanic: "excudebat Roberto Stephano Conradus Badius, anno M.D.LV. viii. idus aprilis."

These verses cannot have been taken from a verse-numbered Vulgate, for in that case ²⁵ and ²⁶, ¹⁹ and ²⁰, would not have been run together ; the verses have been taken from St.¹⁵⁵¹, and have been inserted in the body of a Latin exemplar which was destitute of them.

This is very strong ground for disbelieving in the existence of any Stephanically numbered text of the Latin Vulgate at any earlier date than 1555, for surely, if such a printed text had been extant, other than that contained in St.¹⁵⁵¹ and its descendants, such a text would have been used as copy for the Vulgate of 1555. We infer, then, that the verse-numbered Vulgate which was used in St.¹⁵⁵¹ had disappeared. Probably it was merely used as copy and destroyed.

From what source, then, was the text of the Latin Stephen of 1555 taken? We can answer this question : it was taken from the Paris Stephen of 1545, and was set up with the very same types and in direct imitation of this edition. The only difference is a very slight reduction in the length of the lines and pages.

Now, on examining this edition of 1545, we find that it is not a simple Vulgate text ; it is a double text composed of the Erasmic and Vulgate versions in parallel columns. More curious still, the Erasmic has the outside place, exactly as in the Stephen of 1551.

Now it seems likely that St.¹⁵⁵¹ was produced by setting up the Greek text of St.¹⁵⁵⁰ in the midst of an already existing Erasmic-Vulgate text. For it would be very awkward to set up from three exemplars at once. The Erasmic-Vulgate being to hand in the edition of 1545, we suggest that it was made into copy for St.¹⁵⁵¹, the verses being numbered probably on the margin. This copy having disappeared, a new text of the Vulgate was printed from the 1545 edition, with the verses inserted from the edition of 1551, and the margins brought up to agreement with the same edition. This edition of 1555 takes the place of the lost copy of 1545 from which the printers had worked in making the edition of 1551.

We will conclude the inquiry by a few references to a still earlier Latin text of the Gospels divided into verses. There is extant a volume printed by Stephen in 1553 entitled, In Evangelium secundum Matthaeum Marcum et Lucam Commentarii ex Ecclesiasticis Scriptoris Collecti. It is probably the volume to which Stephen refers in the preface to the 1551 edition, when he says : His igitur interim fruiere, Lector, ut illarum annotationum, quas assiduo cursu persequimur, desiderium lenius feras. Vale. In this work the verses are (1) separated, (2) numbered. Moreover, the text is again double, but with this difference that this time the large print is the Vulgate and the small print the Erasmic. The Vulgate was, in fact, forced into the place of honor by its greater likeness to the text that underlies the commentaries quoted by Stephen.

The first three Gospels are followed by an abbreviation of the Evangelical Harmony of Osiander; Stephen had printed this at Paris in 1545. The present abbreviated reprint has the chapters and verses of the Evangelists employed in each section indicated in a short preface, so that here also we come across the Stephanic verses. And the volume concludes with the Gospel of John (Vulgate and Erasmic as in the previous Gospels) with the commentary of John Calvin. As far, then, as the Gospels are concerned we have a Latin New Testament in 1553 with verses divided and numbered.

Before leaving this somewhat tentative examination of a difficult problem in the genealogy of texts and editions, it may not be out of place to make some remarks with regard to the two glosses that served as our waymarks in our search after the verse-numbered Latin text.

The gloss in Acts 24¹⁹ appears to be inserted in order to relieve the harshness of the construction in the Greek Τινὲς δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀσίας Ἰουδαῖοι, where the verb is wanting: if then we drop the "et" at the beginning of the gloss, and imagine a copy in which the text stood as follows with a marginal reading:

Quidam autem ex	apprehenderunt me
Asia Judaei, quos	clamantes et
oportebat etc.	dicentes; Tolle inimicum nostrum:

we shall see ground for believing that the marginal gloss has got into the wrong place in the text, before quidam . . . Judaei instead of after. This misplacement of the Western readings in Acts has been suspected in other cases, and is a strong reason against believing that they are an original feature of the Old-Latin texts in which they are found so displaced.

On the other hand, with regard to this particular gloss, we ought to recognize (a) its antiquity; (b) its possible Lucanity. It is (a) an ancient gloss because of the feeling it expresses of hostility between Paul and the Jews and the language in which it expresses that feeling. A late glossator would hardly have known that the Jews called Paul "our enemy." Nor is there any expression in the Acts containing that statement which could furnish the material for an assimilation of the text. Hence the matter must be either original or at least so early as to have caught the spirit of the time when the history was composed. For it is clear that they actually did call St. Paul "the enemy." Compare the appeal of Paul to the Galatians (Gal. 4¹⁶) ὥστε ἐχθρὸς ὑμῶν γέγονα ἀληθεύων ὑμῖν; and remark how the watchword has colored the Clementine Homilies, where, under the figure of a conflict between Peter and Simon Magus, the struggle between the Peter party and the Paul party is pictorially set forth; e.g. Clem. Hom. i. 18, "For if he (Simon) were known, he would not be believed; and though his deeds are those of a hater, he is loved; and though an enemy, he is received as a friend," and in the prologue to the Homilies, which is called the Epistle of Peter to James, we find the statement that "some from amongst the Gentiles have rejected my legal preaching, attaching themselves to certain lawless and trifling preaching of the man who is my enemy."

There need, then, be no hesitation in affirming that Paul was described by the Jews as "our enemy," and in this respect the gloss bears the semblance of antiquity and verisimilitude. Yet, as we have said, the evidence is against its having been part of the original Latin text.

As to the other passage, Acts 23²⁵, it is so awkward an insertion, that it makes it almost impossible to construe the words γράψας ἐπιστολήν κτέ., which are now far removed from their apposition. Accordingly the gloss is thrown into a parenthesis in the Clementine Vulgate, so as to ease the construction. I am not, however, quite sure whether this parenthesis is editorial in the authorized Vulgate, or whether it is a survival of the marks of obelization with which the sentences are surrounded in earlier printed Latin Bibles. It seems, however, pretty clear that in the Latin the words have come into the text from without, i.e. either from the margin, or (which is not inconsistent with that supposition) by translation from some other language. It is interesting to observe how, in questions of textual criticism, all roads lead to the origin of the much-debated Western readings.